Hewitt Gallery Exhibition: Self-similarity in Math, Nature and Art - Hewitt Gallery, 1st Floor, Main Building

Self-similarity- the recursive repetition of a structure at different scales or places in a larger form- is ubiquitous in the natural and built environments. It is an emergent phenomenon, generating complexity from a simple initial pattern and a set of transformations on that pattern. Trees, clouds, and coastlines as well as skyscrapers, Hindu temples, and quilts all exhibit prominent self-similarity in repetition, branching patterns, curves, or substructures. Artists have long been fascinated with self-similarity as a means to generate intricate forms, as catharsis for obsessive compulsions, and as an organizing principle for their work.

Archives Presentation: Marymount Manhattan College Presents

Library Archives, 3rd Floor, Nugent Building

The archives is hosting Marymount Manhattan College Presents, a display synched with the College's renovation of its website. The display includes posters, brochures, flyers, and other means by which MMC introduced itself to potential students in the pre-Internet days from the 1950s through the 1990s.
